One NR Tablet Each Night For A Week
Will Correct Your Constipation and Make Constant Dosing Unnecessary. Try It.

Poor digestion and assimilation mean a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Poor assimilation means clogged bowels, fermentation, putrefaction and the formation of poisonous gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headache, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive bowels, bilious attacks, loss of energy, nervousness, poor appetite, insomnia, blood, salivary complexion, pimples, skin diseases, and often other serious ailments.

Ordinary salivary purges and cathartics—soda, pills, castor oil and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but real, lasting benefit can only come through the use of Nature's Remedy.

Get a box of NR Tablets (NR Tablets) each night for a week. The very first night you will sleep better. The following day you will feel better. The next day you will be in better condition and your bowels will be regular. Nature's Remedy sold everywhere your druggist.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ill afflicted people today can be traced back to kidney trouble. The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers, of your blood. Kidney disease is usually indicated by weakness, sleeplessness, nervousness, dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gravel, rheumatism, eczema, and lumbago. All these derangements are nature's signals to warn you that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL HARRIS OIL CAPSULES IMMEDIATELY. The soothing, healing oil stimulates the kidneys, relieves inflammation and destroys the germs which have caused it. Do not wait until tomorrow. Go to your drugist today and insist on GOLD MEDAL HARRIS OIL CAPSULES. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning and will bless the day you first heard of GOLD MEDAL HARRIS OIL. After you feel that you have cured yourself, continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep in first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks. Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three sizes. Money refunded if they do not help you.

KHAKI COLUMN

The following interesting letter has been received from Hugh Miller, a well-known Lancaster boy, who is in active service in France, and was written to his mother, Mrs. Dora Miller, of this city.

"My Dear Mother:—
Sunday again and I am still well and happy. I hope this letter will find you feeling as happy as myself. I suppose you have been patiently waiting for me to tell you more about my travels since I left New York, so I am going to give you a little line on it now as the censoring has about seen its finish and I can tell you more.

Sargeant Major J. Hugh Miller.

The fifteenth of August we left Camp Mills, Long Island, and loaded on the Steamship Saxton, in the Hudson River in N. Y. It was about 1 P. M. when we got on board the ship and about 3 P. M. the bunch (2200) got their first English feed. By the way it was a British crew on the ship—at 5 P. M. we pulled down the Hudson River to the Sound and remained there until 1 P. M., the 16th, when we kissed the States good-bye. Before it was dark we were out of sight of land and for many days we could only see water, not even an island until the 27th of August—Clay's birthday—I thought of it being Clay's birthday and that is partly the way that I remembered it, altho I have kept a little diary for myself. We landed at Liverpool England during the night of 27-28 of August and unloaded the morning of the 28th. We were a tired bunch and were glad to be back on land of some kind again. We passed through quite a portion of Liverpool going to the station, where we boarded a train for a rest camp. We pulled out of the station about eleven in the morning and about two in the afternoon we stopped at Derby for coffee—we were on the train all day, passing through the suburbs of London and at dusk we arrived at Brookwood, England, where we detrained and hiked about two miles to Stoney Castle Camp, Pirbright, England, and that was about 9 P. M. We had some mutton stew and then crawled in the hay—we had to live in tents while we were here and I almost froze to death. I caught an awful cold and didn't get rid of it until we came to France.

The man that I bunked with part of the time that I was in England is now dead. He died last month while we were at the front in Alsace—Broncho-Pneumonia caused his death. He was a fine man and his death was mourned by all who knew him. He had been with us since about June and I knew him better than some of the men as he was a telegrapher in civil life and naturally we were together more.

Well, I better continue my story of the travels.

While I was outside of London I had a days leave and the honor of visiting the second largest city of the world, which I told you in my letter from England. Some town, would like to be in London for a couple of weeks before we return, but I know there will be no chance.

We left the Stoney Castle Camp the morning of Sept. 2, for Brookwood, where we boarded the train for South Hampton, England, enroute to South Hampton we passed through a number of nice towns. We arrived at South Hampton about 1 P. M. and loafed around for a couple of hours and then loaded onto the "Marguerite" a French boat. It was an old side wheeler. We left South Hampton about supper time and crossed the English Channel during the night and some time before I was awake we arrived at Lallavre, France. We unloaded about eight in the morning and hiked to a rest camp in the suburbs of Lallavre, where we cleaned our clothes and took a good steam bath. We left Lallavre at midnight Sept. 5-6 for parts unknown. On the train all day the 6th and we passed through the suburbs of Paris late in the afternoon. In passing through I saw a number of members of the 404th Telegraph Battalion. Do you remember of me speaking of transferring to that Battalion at Camp Dodge last winter? Just think they have been in Paris since early last summer and had I transferred to them as Sgt. 1st Class, I would have been in Paris all this time.

Well we were on the train all night the 6th going south from Paris. Some time before noon of the 7th we arrived at a little one-horse town in the Department, (same as our state) of Cote D'Or. The name of the town was Poulleny. From there we hiked straight up hill for about three or four miles and you should have seen the sweat roll off us poor boys. The town where we billeted was Flainvigny, Cote D'Or, France. It was the town from where I wrote you the first letter in France and spoke about the good bed that I had at the Hotel. Some bed too—I have not had one as good since.

We remained at Flainvigny for one week exactly and then we boarded a train for parts unknown again. On the morning of Sept. 15th, (Sunday) we arrived at Hericourt, France, a pretty good town and remained there until Oct. 5th. We moved from Hericourt to Brestort by car. We were not in Brestort, we were a short ways from there, at dark we started to hike toward the front and at about 11 P. M., we were to our headquarters behind the line in Alsace. We were off French soil and on the soil conquered by the Germans in 1870-71 and which they held for forty years or more. We remained on that front for quite a while, many of the boys winning medals for themselves, but Hugh didn't get one, neither did I receive any wound stripes, but I am as well satisfied.

After arriving on this front we were assigned to the Seventh Corps, of the Second Army. Well we left that front November 4th, for the rear—we went to Belfort and remained there for a week, during which time we had life very easy. On Sunday November 9th, we rose at 2:30 A. M. and boarded train for Toul. We passed through Epinal the afternoon of the 9th and believe me it certainly is situated in a beautiful spot, right on the Meuse river south of Toul. After we passed Epinal the weather kept getting colder and finally I jumped out of the box car that we were riding in and went back to a flat car with a corporal and we tried to find enough horse covers and horse blankets to keep warm, but it was impossible. We froze almost stiff. About nine A. M. we landed at Anvilly, north of Toul—we came over the U. S. A. Railroad from Toul and it looked good to see American trainmen but it looked strange to see them dressed in soldiers uniform. At Anvilly we had to unload all our equipment and supplies in about two inches of mud and you should have seen how muddy we all were. This was the morning of November 11th. At noon the Armistice took effect and when the guns stopped roaring it seemed as tho a bad storm had blown over. Everyone was happy and the men began to spread rumors right away abroad when we would leave for the States.

From Anvilly we came to where we are now located, at Lucey, France.

This was the muddest place you ever saw in your life when we first landed but the soldiers have changed the looks of it considerable now.

The inhabitants have been making wine and champagne and they ditch all the waste in the street—Oh how rotten it smells around here.

We are not such a great distance from Verdun and a number of officers have been up there to look at the ruins and if there is any possible chance I am going to go up there too. It would be worth a lot of money to see a town like Verdun as there is where the worse fighting has been done in this war.

The country up around there is bare as all the buildings have been blown to pieces and the stone has been used for the roads.

This is about all that I can tell you about my travels without making a book out of this letter but when I return I can tell you much more. I am going to write Elmer again tonight and tell him where I am and if he will tell me where he is I will go and see him as I think they will let me away to do so.

Mother, I have seen nothing worth while sending you for a Christmas present, but if I get a chance to go into Lucey or Toul I will get something for you. We are not permitted to visit these two cities but I may possibly get to go in anyway.

I wish you, Clay, Uncle Mat, Uncle Charlie, Aunt Bessie, Lillie and her folks, Sallie and her folks, all the neighbors and all the other Lancaster people a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

With bushels of love and oodles of kisses, I remain,

Your loving son,
Hugh."

"Meddled we'd better forget digging gold and dig back for home, hey?"
"Everybody would laugh at us. No, I'll be all right in a day or two and we'll strike a fresh trail, see?"

Thus spoke Hoger Small, rich man's son of Chesterton, fifty miles distant, to his fides Achates, Zeb Wallis. They were in an old barn and, lying on a heap of hay and covered to the chin with a ragged horse blanket, Hoger, with mottled face, watched his chum and nurse bustle about.

The latter had set up light house-keeping. He had a small one-burner kerosene stove, a skillet and a few other kitchen necessities, a package of cereal, a bottle of milk and an old teapot. This was constantly simmering on the little oil burner and gave out an aromatic steam.

"You see, you've got the measles," said Zeb, "and all you can do for it is to lie still and keep warm, so I borrowed the blanket without asking, and as to the warm drinks you've got to have there's loads of pennyroyal in the fields and that's the tea you're getting. I found a letter with a return and a special delivery stamp so I had cut them off and sold them for ten cents and bought the cereal."

"Oh, Zeb! The letter was intended for some one."

"Course it was. It's addressed to a woman and some one dropped it before it was mailed. I'll hunt her up and deliver it."

"You're a true blue one, ain't you?" voiced Hoger in grateful admiration.

"I try to be. You would run away from home and, having none myself, I was glad to join you. Now you're sick, think I'd drop out?"

Just then there were sounds of jolly juvenile voices outside. Half a dozen boys peered in cautiously. "It's the two fellows we heard about running away from home," spoke their leader.

"Keep out! This is a hospital just now," warned Zeb.

"What do you mean?" was inquired.
"Just what I say. My chum's down with the measles and I'm nursing him," and Zeb went outside with the group.

"Huh!" muttered one of them, "He's lucky. Don't have to go to school. Wish I had his sickness."
"You do?" challenged Zeb, his eye glinting. "Look here, any of you boys anxious to catch the measles? You don't have to go to school and be accommodated at ten cents per. All you got to do is to pay a dime, come and sit by my chum for an hour or so and before a day or so you'll break out most beautifully."

Zeb laughed at his own conceit, but the boys went away thoughtful. At noon two of the boys returned with an air of mystery and twenty cents between them.

"Say," observed one of them, sheepishly, "we'll take twenty cents' worth of your measles between us."

"That's business," said Zeb, and saw them seated beside his patient and proceeded down town to buy some delicacies for his invalid chum.

However infection did not occur and the would-be victims missed the opportunity of an anticipated vacation, but the story got out. Miss Ina Blair, schoolteacher, learned of the incident. "I never heard of such cold-blooded diabolism!" she told an assistant. "This Zeb Wallis must be a horrible wretch. I shall see that he and his chum leave town at once."

She was pretty as a picture and gentle as a dove, but for a day or two had been laboring under disappointment and chagrin. Four days previous a certain shy, but adoring young man had whispered to her at a tennis party that he intended sending her a very important letter next day, and it had not come.

Zeb, making a fresh infusion of pennyroyal tea, was challenged from outside the barn by a young lady waving her parasol at him.

"Come here, you young reprobate!" she called. "Are you the wretch who has been trying to scatter an epidemic of disease through the town?"

"Na'm," dissented Zeb. "I've just been trying to keep my chum, Hoger Small, comfortable."

"Well, you must move on and leave here, or I'll have the authorities after you. I am Miss Blair, the schoolteacher, and I must protect my charges."
"Oh, say!" abruptly ejaculated Zeb, "I've got something for you," and he handed over the letter from which he had clipped the stamps. Miss Blair examined it with trembling fingers. She read the inclosure.

"You dear boy!" she cried, almost hugging him. "Tell me where you got it."
"I found it," explained Zeb. "Was it stealing, taking the stamps? Then I guess I'd atone for the best friend I ever had, Hoger Small." Miss Blair led him on to tell all about his strange doings, tracing in his fidelity a fervor that showed a veritable diamond in the rough.

"After all, only friendship and love count for much," she said, and forthwith saw to it, amid her joy over the letter, that the two wayfarers were comfortably housed, the father of Hoger sent for, and she so pleaded for loyal, loving Zeb with the latter that he decided to take Zeb and make something of him.

And Miss Ina Blair was glad of all of this, for how her future might have been marred had the lost letter never been found!

Original "Gag Rule."

"Gag rule" was a phrase applied to a resolution passed by congress in May, 1830, that three-fourths of all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating in any way to the subject of slavery or the abolition of slavery should lie on the table without being printed or referred. The rule was abolished a few years later.

Some Tables Priceless.

There is a tremendous demand today for old mahogany or oak tables. If here are any historic associations attached to these tables they bring fabulous prices. There are plenty of tables in the country possessing real historic interest, but none of them is in the least likely at the moment to come in the open market. The table on which Napoleon signed his abdication may be said to be priceless. In England there is a mahogany table which tradition says was washed up on the coast of Clare after the wreck of the Spanish armada.

"BABY DOLL"

By PERCIVAL MARSH.

Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union

When Horace Barr announced to his three spinster sisters that he had at last accumulated ten thousand dollars and that it was safe in bank, the satisfying complacency filled their souls that they would never have to starve. He had gone into buying grain from nearby farmers and had made money fast, storing his purchases and shipping to the city always on a rising market.

When one day he entered the house and slumped down on the table a package of legal looking documents, with glowing mention remarking, "There are the title deeds to house and lot, free and clear," all hands smiled with delight, for they knew that a permanent roof was assured.

"Going to the city to buy an automobile," he announced somewhat later. "We're going to take all the good out of life we can get." About a week later there came a telegram to Horace, the elder sister. It read: "Home Tuesday afternoon by new auto. Also a wife," and the flutter this information caused kept the three astounded and suspenseful sisters on tantalizing hooks through forty-eight hours.

They were kindly of heart, though having narrow notions in some respects. Horace had been a good brother and they hoped he had made a suitable choice of a helpmeet.

She came and the sisters stared. They had never seen greater beauty. Plump, petite, ever smiling, it could not be in the heart of any one in the world to resist her. She dazzled them with her pretty ways. As the three sisters were alone Horace said with a sigh: "She loves Horace, that is sure. She greets her dear home as a palace. She has no relatives, Horace says, so there will be no divided and interfering interests. Only five words express it."

"Speak them, Horace," urged Muriel.

"She is a baby doll," and that settled conviction seemed unanimous.

"One thing," spoke Horace, a week later, "Netta is no gadder. She loves his home."

"Yes," echoed Muriel, "and her devotion to Horace is almost pathetic."

"And did you ever see such fancy work as she is capable of doing?" supplemented Horace, and, when the latter complimented Netta on this feature the next day, the latter said modestly:

"I ought to know something in that line, for I spent three years as an apprentice. You see, artificial flower making is my trade."

"Trade?" stilled Horace echoed the jarring word.

"Well, it is scarcely a profession, is it?" smiled Netta sweetly. "You see, when your brother first met me I had become forewoman in a millinery supply house. They say I had become an expert, so if ever dear Horace has business reverses we have something to fall back upon."

The reverses came. A shrewd, none too scrupulous grain buyer appeared as a rival in the field and Horace began to lose trade. He made some unlucky purchases. In six months his surplus at the bank was gone. A little later he had to mortgage the home and sell the automobile. Then he had a serious breakdown.

"Sisters," said Netta one day, "the time has come for us to show our mettle. I want you, Horace, to go to the city tomorrow to help me buy some stock. I am going to start into the artificial flower business in a modest way. I know the line. I know the trade, and I know further that inside of a week you three can become experts with all your quick ideas and industry and niftiness."

So Netta took Horace with her to the city and spent a week studying the market. She had some money of her own and she invested it unhesitatingly. She purchased ribbons and sheets of silk, and satin and other fabrics used in making pretty floral counter-felts. She bought dies, and wire and tools. By the end of two weeks the big parlors were transformed into busy work rooms. System and order prevailed. A thorough business woman Netta had an immediate outlet for her wares. Horace, recuperating, murmured over his uselessness.

"Ready to work?" questioned Netta brightly. "Very well. First, you shall help pack and ship. Then you shall keep the books. Then, dear, as soon as we are well started, instead of selling to the jobbers you shall be our traveling saleswoman. We will work up direct clients of our own and make a double profit. Why, the business will be ideal."

"How cozy it has been, and how nice," said Horace one day, a year later. The mortgage had been paid off and they had a new automobile and money in bank. (The business had grown so that work rooms downtown were necessary and Horace was slowly, safely feeling his way back into his old business.)

"Horace," said Horace to her brother one day, "I did make a serious wrong when she first came here."

"Nobody has discovered it," declared Horace good-naturedly. "I called her a baby doll."
"Meaning pretty dainty?" Why not? Sweet name, isn't it? Why, she would feel flattered if you said it. Don't let that rest on your memory. She went to sleep in my night crying for the joy of finding all in life worth

Lancaster, Ky., January 2, 1919

In a report on Christmas Day, it was stated by the Inspector and Examiner that in his examination of the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission, he found more than 100,000 illiterates had been taught during the past five years, leaving about 100,000 to be taught before 1920.

The aim set by Kentucky to wipe out illiteracy before the 1920 census is taken must be accomplished. While it may mean a gigantic task to teach 100,000 in one year to read and write it will, in fact, be easier than it was in the pioneer stages of the movement to teach the first 100,000. Public sentiment is now solidly behind the movement, better methods of teaching adults have been worked out, and a more complete organization has been built up, and the fact that 1920 is near and Kentucky's rank will then be fixed for another decade affords a powerful stimulus.

If 10,000 teachers should each teach ten the task would soon be done. Many teachers in Kentucky have taught twice or three times that many during the past few years. If the citizens would divide the task with the teachers, and 10,000 citizens, men and women, would each teach five, it would be done. The war has revealed the handicap of illiteracy and the need of moonlight schools. The five thousand soldiers taught at Camp Taylor as well as the 95,000 men and women taught in the moonlight schools and in their homes will be missionaries who will spread the gospel of everybody's duty to learn to read and write.

A sweeping campaign will be conducted during 1919 to make for Kentucky's illiterates, one of all, a Happy New Year which they can read the news and wield the pen. Every patriotic citizen should enlist for the service he can best perform. Certainly all will take a stand for giving these Kentuckians a chance.

Here we are fairly started on 1919. The salutation of "Happy New Year" has just ceased ringing in your ears, and your New Year's resolutions are all made and in order.

Perhaps you have made up your mind to be more kindly this year; perhaps you have determined to be more economical; maybe on the contrary you have resolved to be more generous; possibly more industrious.

These, whatever they may be, are the individual good qualities which you wish to gain. But there is one quality which we shall every one of us need very much through 1919, and that is patience.

We have just come to the end of a great war, for which we have all borne deprivations and made sacrifices, and naturally we are all very anxious to see the conditions of peace restored exactly as they used to be.

But this will be a matter of time. It has taken time and infinite effort to prepare the country for war, and life will not lapse into its old lines in a moment.

It will take time to bring our army home. It will take time for inflated war prices to go down to normal level. There will have to be slow readjustment of every kind, possibly some change in wages, and this cannot be hurried. We must continue to conserve food for starving Europe until the next harvest. There will be a Victory loan, for our men must be supplied as hitherto until the army is completely mustered out.

The problems of the government will be many and serious and we must not expect impossibilities.

Now shall we all resolve to meet these conditions with the utmost patience? All in favor signify by saying Aye. Contrary same sign. Resolution carried unanimously.

Patience shall be our watchword for 1919.

Oiling the Wheels.

No one can afford to let another person exceed in politeness, and there is nothing in the world that will oil the wheels of life like the lubricant of courtesy. Try it in your daily life and see. No one will chide you for not being in good form, even if you should slip in a few obsolete terms. For in this busy age each one is an arbiter of fashion himself. It would be a refreshing thing to introduce a few of the old-fashioned variety of social amenities—at least it would be refreshing to the elders of some of the boys and girls of the period.

Truth Above All.

Truth is the secret of eloquence and of virtue, the basis of moral authority; it is the highest summit of art and of life.—Amalet.

Approved by Experience.

An eastern clergyman says that kissing is a relic of the dark ages. There are many customs that come down from the dark ages—calling, for one.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Knife vs. Wife.

"Most men," began the almost philosopher, "are aware that it is bad manners to eat with their knife, but lots of them also forget that it is sometimes good policy to eat with their wife."

Paymaster for the Party.

As an inducement to Cecil, aged four, to attend Sunday school for the first time, she was allowed to carry the pennies to be put into the collection envelope. When the class monitor came around the teacher and the rest of the class were very much amused to hear her say in her most dignified tones, "Here, girls, I will pay the fares."

Answer Letters Promptly.

Punctuality is as important in social and business correspondence as it is in personal conduct. Men and women in business learn the importance of replying to letters as soon as received. Formal social notes such as invitations, wedding announcements or death notices should be acknowledged as soon as received and even friendly letters demand a reply within a week after their receipt, if true courtesy is observed.—Biddy Rye.

Little Things Cause Sunshine.

The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams that are bright all the time. To give up something, when giving up will prevent unhappiness; to yield, when persisting will cause and fret others; to go a little around rather than come against another; to take an ill look or a cross word quietly, rather than resent or return it—these are the ways in which clouds and storms are kept off, and a pleasant and steady sunshine secured.—Atkin.

Like to Be an Alligator?

Alligators have to be fed on meat but they need no food from September 1 to May 1, for that is their hibernating season, when they do not eat at all. Alligator skins are used for making bags, suitcases, purses, belts, cushion covers, etc., and the teeth and bones are made into cuff links, paper knives, whistles and many forms of cheap jewelry and ornaments. It has been said that the state of Florida receives more than a million dollars a year from trade in alligators.

Colors of Paints.

The color of paint is sometimes more than a matter of appearance. A black body more readily absorbs heat than a light body and in certain cases the light-colored paint seems to be preferable to the dark for this reason. Transformer burnouts in hot climates are reported to have been apparently due to the continuous high atmospheric temperatures. With this heat the further heating from the lead has proved excessive and damage has resulted that might have been avoided with different painting.

Scots All Lovers of Dogs.

Scotland is a great sheep-growing country, yet it loves the dog; gives him his due in life and revere him in death. At the castle in Edinburgh there is a little plot of ground where the dogs of the Scottish soldiers are buried; it is a charming spot, and on many little tombstones there are tender tributes to departed friends. In front of Saint Giles cathedral in the same noble city, there is a monument to a little skye terrier, and upon it, carved in stone, an inscription to Robbie, who refused to leave the church yard where his master was buried, and died upon his grave.

The Difference.

Doing easily what others find difficult is talent; doing what is impossible for talent is genius.—Amalet.

The 'Once Over.

Life is a book. Read it carefully, for you can only read it once.—Boston Transcript.

German Title of Honor.

"Von" before a name in German denotes a privilege title, either inherited or bestowed by a monarch upon his subject for meritorious services. While formerly this prefix was found in military or feudal families only, many commoners, capitalists of industry, scientists, financiers and artists were so honored by their monarchs. The title is either hereditary or ceases with the death of the distinguished person.

Farmhouses Modernized.

As farmhouses become adapted to the taste of the women who are, in so many cases, taking over their management, it is found that many of the old institutions of the farmhouse—the parlor, the many small rooms, the dark halls—are disappearing. Partitions are torn out to make spacious living rooms; porches are added, and everything is arranged for the utmost convenience of the housekeeper who is also tender of the fields.—Exchange.

Aerial Compasses.

Many difficulties had to be overcome in the production of a satisfactory compass for aerial work. Chief among these was that of neutralizing the magnetism of the engine (and in particular the magneto) and of preventing the effect of centrifugal force, which caused the card or dial inside the compass to swing in a direction quite independent of north when the airplane was banking on a turn. However, a truly excellent compass is now in use.

Overcoming Obstacles.

Sir George Redd's golden rule for the attainment of old age: "I have aimed at health and happiness, and when confronted by a formidable obstacle I have first tried to knock it over; failing this, to get around it; if not, then under it; and if all these maneuvers failed I have been content to lie down in its grateful shade, handling it as a beautiful dressing in disguise."

Nero's Golden Palace.

The golden house was the palace of Nero in ancient Rome, which occupied the valley between the Palatine and Esquiline, and connected the palaces of the Caesars with the gardens of Maecenas. It was built after the great fire of 64 A. D., and was so large that it contained porticos 2,800 feet long and inclosed a lake where the colossal statues stood. The forecourt contained a colossus of Nero 120 feet high.

Pleasant Old Age.

What blessings are these—that the soul having served its time, so to speak, in the campaigns of desire and ambition, rivalry and hatred, and all the passions, should live in its own thoughts and, as the expression goes, should dwell apart. Indeed, if it has in store any of what I may call the food of study and philosophy, nothing can be pleasanter than an old age of leisure.—Exchange.

Monasteries.

The monasteries once thickly strewn throughout England and much of Europe were called abbeys, from being ruled by abbots—or abbots from abbots, Syriac for "father"—as those governed by a prior were called priories.

No Time for That.

You can't become a man of mark, a man of real achievement, so long as you are let an echo of other people. You can't possibly progress as you should in your chosen life work. The world which clouds thy soul with doubt
Is but a carpet inside out.
It's when we view these shreds and ends,
We know not what the whole intends;
So when on earth, things look not odd,
They're working out some scheme of God.
What now seem random strokes, will there
In order and design appear.
Then shall we praise what here we spurned
For then the carpet shall be turned.

WAYS WITH LEFTOVER MEATS

ASTY sauce served with leftover meats often makes a dish that is more palatable than it was in the original.

Mutton Ragout.—Melt a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, add the same amount of flour, stir until smooth and brown. Add one cupful of well-seasoned stock, stir until thick, then add two cupfuls of cold chopped mutton and let it stand on the back part of the stove for 15 minutes. When ready to serve add a tablespoonful of catsup and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, pepper and salt to taste.

Curry of Lamb.—Brown a teaspoonful of chopped onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter, add a teaspoonful of curry powder and two teaspoonfuls of flour, stir until smooth and brown, then add a half teaspoonful of chopped nut and two cupfuls of chopped cooked lamb, stir for two minutes to thoroughly mix the seasoning with the meat, then add two cupfuls of stock made from extract of beef, cook until the sauce is thickened. Season and serve.

Ragout of Veal.—Brown a teaspoonful of onion in two tablespoonfuls of butter, with a tablespoonful of cooked, chopped mushrooms. Add a tablespoonful of flour and brown, then add one cupful of stock, stir until smooth, then add one cupful of roast veal cut in pieces. Season with salt and pepper and serve.

Kidney With Mushrooms.—Prepare the kidneys as directed above. Brown a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and brown. Add one cupful of stock, salt and paprika to taste, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a half cupful of mushrooms cut in slices. Add the kidneys and cook until well heated through, and serve.

Our Terms Will Be Strictly Cash Or Produce.

Business conditions are such and so many changes have taken place in the last few years that we deem this method of doing business best for both merchant and customer.

Nearly all lines of business now-a-days are conducted on a cash basis and the merchant with money to pay his bills promptly is the one who gets the goods and quick deliveries.

We take this method of notifying our friends of this change in our business so as to save any further embarrassment for either of us.

We appreciate the business which you have given us in the past and we hope you will continue to favor us with same.

Be Kind and Patient.

There is more special grace requisite and manifest in watchful perseverance in little kindnesses and habitual patience at home, in abstinence from conversational disparagement of others, and in resistance to habits of sloth and undue self-indulgence in private life than in the performance of great public duties under the observation of multitudes.

Explicit Directions.

Jessie was asked by a man if she could tell him where Mr. Dodge lived. Pointing to the west, she replied: "Go that way and that way, and stop at the first house where there's a dog."

Unfortunate Fact.

There is one fact that is pretty accurate. Men who make speeches like to make them.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Human Fruitage.

Nature does not bear fruit for herself, but for man. The branch does not bear the rich clusters for its own selfish appetite. Our fruitage must be for mankind. Your aim is a mistaken one if you are seeking spiritual comfort, quiet satisfaction, joy here and hereafter, just for your own little.—Christian Herald.

Mexican Sacrificial Stone.

The sacrificial stone was the stone on which human victims were sacrificed, before the war god Huitzilopochtli, in the principal Aztec temple in Mexico. It was dug up near the site of the temple in 1791, and is now in the Mexican national museum. The stone is disk shaped, 8 3/5 feet in diameter and 2 1/2 feet thick. The sides are covered with elaborate sculptures.

How to Get Rich.

Some men would have no trouble in getting rich if they held on to the money they earn as they do to the money they borrow.

Goodlysome Herbs.

I pluck up the goodlysome herbs of sentences by printing, cut them by reading, digest them by musing, and lay them up at length in the high seat of memory—by gathering them together.—Queen Elizabeth.

Also, Too True.

"Many Millions Short."—Newspaper headline. Lots of persons go on the supposition that you can't believe everything you read in the newspapers, but how few, oh, how few, will doubt this!

Felt Need of Change.

Charles was staying in the country where playmates were few. So long as it was Hobson's choice he amused himself with a little neighbor girl some years younger than himself, but on being invited to play with an older girl well supplied with toys, he entirely abandoned his former playmate regardless of all her attempts to lure him back. On being remonstrated with by his mother for his neglect of Julia he disgustedly remarked, "Oh mother, I'll go back to Julia some day, but a fellow sometimes wants a change."

It's Ended Then.

Ameham—"How can I tell when my honeymoon is over?" Oldham—"When your wife stops telling things and begins asking questions."

The Help in Motion.

"Another thing that I've noticed in my adventurous career," observed the almost philosopher, "is that a fellow who has a breezy way about him is usually pretty fresh."

Tools to Make a Rifle.

Nine hundred and ninety-seven cutting tools alone are required in manufacturing a modern rifle. The twist drill is one of the busiest of these. To supply 1,000,000 rifles, 99,000,000 holes must be drilled. Shrapnel, torpedoes, machine guns, biplanes, motor trucks and anti-aircraft guns require from 70 to 5,000 holes each.

Remove Mildew.

Take any common soap, size according to area of material that is affected. Put soap in small pieces, add a little water to it and put on top of stove until dissolved. When about the consistency of cream take from the fire. Stir in common salt and cover the mildewed fabric with the mixture. If one application does not suffice, two will be sure to do the work. After applying the mixture, expose to the sun for some hours and then wash off.

Not Always.

We always like those who admire us and La Rochefoucauld; we do not always like those whom we admire.

Unreasonable.

Several boys were holding a conference on the street corner. One boy kept correcting another's mistakes in English until the offender suddenly squared himself before his critic and demanded, "Gee whiz! what is vention for if a feller has to talk proper all the time?"

His Summer Name.

One day William, while visiting his grandmother, met the woman across the hall with her little dog. William inquired what she called the dog and she replied: "We call him Zero because we got him in the winter." William then asked: "Well, if you call him Zero in the winter what do you call him in the summer?"

Be Kind Always.

One great trouble with unkind thoughts is that it is so very difficult to keep them only thoughts; sooner or later they find utterance. We may fancy that we are keeping our uncharitable opinions to ourselves, but they are almost certain to express themselves in look or tone, if not in word. The only way to be really kind is to be kind clear through.—Exchange.

Cattle Buying for Swift & Company

Swift & Company buys more than 9000 head of cattle, on an average, every market day.

Each one of them is "sized up" by experts.

Both the packer's buyer and the commission salesman must judge what amount of meat each animal will yield, and how fine it will be, the grading of the hide, and the quantity and quality of the fat.

Both must know market conditions for live stock and meat throughout the country. The buyer must know where the different qualities, weights, and kinds of cattle can be best marketed as beef.

If the buyer pays more than the animal is worth, the packer loses money on it. If he offers less, another packer, or a shipper or feeder, gets it away from him.

If the seller accepts too little, the live-stock rather gets less than he is entitled to. If he holds out for more than it is worth, he fails to make a sale.

A variation of a few cents in the price per hundred pounds is a matter of vital importance to the packer, because it means the difference between profit and loss.

Swift & Company,
U. S. A.

The Scar Bearers.

Hundreds of American soldiers from Privates all the way up the line to General Pershing will return from France decorated for conspicuous bravery.

Some will wear the Distinguished Service Medal, some the Croix de Guerre. Some will be awarded the Victorin Cross.

Everyone of them will have done some valorous deed of aggression or rescue.

But there will be some 50-odd thousand who came out of the fight more or less disfigured who may wear no ribbons.

These are the scar bearers, the wounded.

Not one of them but faced death in all the many guises that German ingenuity of the most devilish kind could contrive. But theirs was only the ordinary chance of war. Theirs the misfortune of being struck down before they had their chance.

Some will not be permanently disabled. But thousands will be. And everyone that is, everyone that took his chance over there must have his chance once more over here.

Uncle Sam has worked out an elaborate plan of rehabilitation for these wounded heroes. If they need medical attention after their return they will get it. If they need special training to fit them for such work only as their condition will permit them to do they will get that training. Whatever assistance is necessary they will have.

And Uncle Sam will bear the expense, gladly, gratefully, for his obligation is one that can never be adequately met.

All of us must remember this in connection with the next liberty loan. Not all of the money will go for martial needs, for peace enforcement or for the scores of other demands the governmental plans will precipitate.

Much of it will be devoted to making payment for the services of those who did their best to pay the price of world freedom.

For them too much cannot be done.

Backache? Kidneys weak? Distressed with urinary ills? Want a reliable kidney remedy?

Don't have to look far. Use what Lancaster people recommend. Every street in Lancaster has its cases.

Berea's After-War Program. For Returning Soldiers & Others

The world conflict of arms is over; that of commerce, industry and social reform is just beginning. The flower of the manhood of America which rallied to the defense of our great nation is now returning home to follow the ordinary pursuits of peace. These returning soldiers with their enlarged vision of life will naturally become the leaders of their communities, and to do justice to themselves and their people they must be thoroughly prepared.

Berea College, with its fixed high principles and ideals, makes this warning call to every ambitious young man and woman in the great mountain region. Berea has been one hundred per cent patriotic through the war—contributing more than one thousand students and twenty faculty members to the service—and now it is ready to enlarge and intensify its courses to meet the immediate needs of peace.

Thorough courses are given in the Foundation, Vocational, Academy, Normal and College Departments.

Berea recognizes that there are splendid people in the mountains who cannot get an education in the average high priced school, and to those people a special invitation is given.

There are two important terms before this school year closes.

The Winter Term, which begins January 1st, and the Spring Term, which begins March 28th.

The cost for the Winter Term, including board, room, and incidental fee is $40.00. For the Spring Term, $37.

CHEAP RATIONS FOR HORSES

Animals Performing Hard Work May Be Given Straw and Corn Stover in Limited Quantities.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Cheap feeds, such as straw and corn stover, have a place in the horse ration. For growing colts and for horses doing hard work these roughages may be fed in limited quantities, supplementary to a more nutritious ration.

A caution is timely in regard to feeding bulky roughages low in nutrients. Horses have comparatively small stomachs and their digestive anatomy is in no way suited to handle a great bulk of feed. Little nourishment is derived from a pound of such roughage, and in maintaining a hard-working animal too great a bulk of feed would necessarily be taken into the body. It is therefore desirable to combine with a limited quantity of stover or straw sufficient legume hay, grain, or other nutritious feed to meet the individual requirements of the horse. A small portion of some luxuriant feed, such as silage, roots, bran, or alfalfa, may well be included in a ration containing a large proportion of corn stover or straw.

Cottonseed meal has met with considerable disfavor among horse feeders, but it may be fed in limited quantities if due care is exercised. It is Character, Soundness and Good Conformation.

A heavy protein concentrate but particularly laxative in character is quite likely to produce diarrhoea unless the quantity is limited. Its proper use is as a supplement to a carbonaceous ration. One-half pound daily being usual, although in some parts of the South several pounds daily have been fed with success. The more favorable results have come from feeding it in connection with grains and blackstrap molasses. Cottonseed meal is not palatable to horses. In most cases not more than two pounds daily per animal should ever be given, and before that limit is reached special note should be taken of its effect. Most horse feeders prefer the use of oil meal. The following rations are suggested for horses:

GROUND SOY BEANS FOR PIGS

Found to Be About 10 Per Cent Superior to Wheat Middlings in Test at Wisconsin.

As a supplement to cornmeal for growing and fattening pigs, the Wisconsin station found that ground soy beans proved about 10 per cent superior to wheat middlings, figuring the cost of the feeds as the same. The Indiana station compared rations of two parts of cornmeal and one part of soy-bean meal with equal proportions and with five parts of cornmeal and one part of tankage for pork production. The soy-bean ration produced the largest daily gains, and this with the smallest quantity of feed consumed for each pound of gain.

Biblical Town of Gaza.
At Miztar, or the watchtower, still exists to the east of the town of Gaza. It is where Samson is said to have carried the gates of the city. On the road from Gaza to Jaffa are ancient olive trees, many of them more than one thousand years old, with gnarled bark and immense trunks. There is an old legend which credits Gaza with the invention of the first mechanical clocks. These were perhaps the sund clocks which are still used in some mosques.

Fully Explained.
Janie was asked why she did not go next door any more to play with her little chum. She replied: "On last dispositions didn't match, so we disband our acquaintance."

MINERAL MATTER FOR SWINE

Mixture of Charcoal, Salt, Ashes, Sulphur and Copperas Will Tend to Prevent Worms.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It has been asserted by various experienced feeders of hogs that a mixture of charcoal, ashes, lime, salt, sulphur and copperas kept where the hogs can eat it will tend to prevent worm infestation. There is no positive experimental evidence, however, in support of the idea that such a mixture will prevent worm infestation, and it is of value therefore as a source of mineral matter in the diet, and perhaps as an appetizer and tonic, rather than as a worm preventive. A balanced ration may furnish all the necessary feed nutrients, yet the system of the hog craves mineral matter. The mineral matter is not under control, and in order to make sure that the hogs have an abundant supply, free access should be given to a mineral mixture. The following is a formula for such a mixture:

Charcoal Mixture.

Charcoal	1 bushel
Hardwood ashes	1 bushel
Slaked lime	8 pounds
Salt	4 pounds
Verined copperas	2 pounds

Mix the lime, salt, and sulphur thoroughly and then mix with the charcoal and ashes. Dissolve the copperas in one quart of hot water and sprinkle the solution over the whole mass, mixing it thoroughly. Keep some of this mixture in a box, before the hogs at all times, or place in a self-feeder.

MORE TICK-FREE COUNTIES

Federal Quarantine Against Cattle Fever Ticks Lifted in Ten Southern States.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

At least 100 counties and probably a number of parts of counties have just been released from federal quarantine against the cattle fever tick, according to officials of the bureau of animal industry, who have received reports from ten Southern states in which the work is being carried forward. Eighty-three counties and 35 parts of counties were released in December, 1917, constituting a record up to that time. The unprecedented amount of territory released this year includes areas in nine states.

"Nemesis."

Nemesis was a goddess of justice and divine retribution. The word comes from a Greek verb meaning to dent out, distribute, dispense. In Greek mythology Nemesis was a goddess personifying allotment, or the divine distribution to every man of his precise share of fortune, good and bad. It was her special function to see that the proper proportion of individual prosperity was preserved, and that anyone who became too prosperous or was too much uplifted by his prosperity should be reduced or punished.

Athleticism in the East.

The general athletic awakening is perhaps the most important effect that our occupation of the Philippines has had upon the far East. Just as the old Olympic games, begun by one village, grew to be the great recurring event at which all the Hellenic people could meet in peaceful competition, so this modern athletic movement, starting from England has spread to other far eastern peoples, and has given them not only a ground for friendly meeting, but also a basis for genuine respect and mutual understanding.

The True Artist.

The artist is always a child in freshness of feeling; in unworldly delight in the things which do not add to one's estate, but which make for inward joy and peace, and that easy possession of the world which brings the sense of freedom, the right to be happy, and the faith that life is greater than its works, and a man more important than his toil. A race, like an individual, must get this consciousness of possession before the work of the day becomes imperative and absorbing. —Hamilton W. Maule.

Useful.

An ounce of pulverized borax put into a quart of boiling water and boiled for use will be found useful for taking grease spots from woolen goods.

Merely a Superstition.

There is no kind of a rod, or instrument, which will locate minerals in the earth with any degree of certainty. Sometimes a bed of iron ore will affect the magnetic needle of a compass, or of a surveying instrument, but there is nothing that will locate the precious metals.

STRAIGHT STREET By MAY NEWCOMBE.

From time immemorial what had once been a country cow path straggled through the nucleus of what finally became Groverdale. As houses were built here and there along its sinuous length, it assumed, or absorbed, or was given a name: "Crooked Lane."

When the first small stores began to find a location on a line with the depot, the town commissioners put a broad line west, condensed curves and windings and laid out a spacious, correct thoroughfare. It was not a pretty appetizing, they bestowed on the new thoroughfare, but it was fully appropriate as a contrast. It became Straight street.

To do business on Straight street was to be quite in the business sphere, to live farther out in its residential section was to be acknowledged and accepted socially. One day a stranger entered the town, a jaunty, fairly well-dressed fellow, about twenty-two. He was straight as an arrow, supple, swift of gait, bright-eyed, wide awake, suggesting a person seeking a brand-new environment and on the alert to seize its best opportunities. A whimsical smile crossed his expressive face as he glanced at the sign on a lamp post.

"Straight street," he read, as though it had made a pleasant sound. "That suits me and I take it as a harbinger of fortune. It's the road I've had in mind."

The young man started looking for a room, a cheap room. Side thoroughfares invited in this direction, but he maintained his tramp along the street called "Straight" until he finally found an apartment suited to his thin purse, and then cast about for work. His brisk, cheery ways and frank, open personality caught the fancy of the bookkeeper of a large factory and Abel Morse, as he gave his name, was employed.

He became a favorite all around. There was one peculiarity about him—he took long jaunts, and it might have been remarked that he never left Straight street. Beyond were the dance halls, drinking places, tawdry side shows and rollicking crowds, but, in town or leaving it, Straight street became his beaten path. One moonlight night he was peering its middle part, for the steps were blocked when new cement was being laid. Abruptly a spirited horse attached to a trap, burst into the street. The animal became frightened at the glare of a road roller and made a dash across the rubble stone and lay in debris. A handsome girl in a steady to the tense, straining reins, but the horse was frantic. As the vehicle was all but upsetting, the young man sprang at the head of the speeding animal. He clung to the bridle, was dragged, swung, almost trampled, but halted the frightened steed at last. "Oh, don't let him get hurt, trampling among the elders and glass!" called out Miss Eva Powers, his driver, and Morse led the horse in the center smooth roadway. "You had better let me drive him home," he said, and that was how it came about that he first saw at the sumptuous Powers' mansion modest, petite Mary Lane, seat-stress.

Thereafter when he called to see Mary at home or to chat with her in the garden, Miss Powers smiled indulgently and Mary was flattered and pleased at the attentions of the manly, good-looking young fellow. There came about a rapidly occurring series of events. The war came on, Mary was proud about her lover when he was the first to enter the service. Miss Powers gave him quite a public reception when he came from camp, a first lieutenant. Some where Abel Morse had learned discipline, self-control and the power to lead them. He and Mary had become engaged. He was popular with his comrades, a model to the young men of the town and in direct line for further advancement.

He had just left Mary one afternoon and was crossing the garden to the street when a hurrying, flushed and hard-breathing man almost ran into him. Then the latter halted, stared and regarded Morse with a certain insolent, triumphant look.

"Double luck! Well, well, Ned Durand! And a blooming lieutenant! I've heard of you. I saw you before. And transformed into Abel Morse, U. S. A. Some rise in the world, eh, from corner 2247? What is it worth to shut my mouth?"

"Hold that man!" burst forth sharply, and Miss Powers came rushing into view. Her direction was to Morse. "He has just entered the house, and has stolen a case of Jowds. There they are, in his pocket. Bring him to my father, and we shall see how far his moonish throat will carry him!"

Todd Brewster, ex-convict, thief, left Groverdale that evening a cowed skulker, with evidence sufficient behind him to send him back where he belonged, if he dared even to menace Abel Morse again. Within a week the assumed name of the latter was legalized.

To heartless and to drunken, a real soldier had his comrades through the little town in farewell. From the Powers' remarkable Mary Lane kissed her hand to this beloved fiancee, and Eva Powers, who alone with her father knew of his buried past, waved her hand in fervent recognition and encouragement that told him that whatever came, honor and glory were his portion.
